

REBORN THROUGH HIM: Brand Film

Runtime: ~45 sec | Format: Vertical (IG Reels / TikTok) | Location: St Anne's Park Purpose: Community + brand awareness: no product. Product video to follow (clothes ready end of July). Cast: 3 (confirmed): Daniel + 2 friends (FRIEND 2, FRIEND 3) Wardrobe: Everyday clothing Core message: Even if your friends are against you, put all your faith in the Lord. Be bold in your faith.

SCENE 1: WALK & SIT (0:00-0:05)

3 friends walking through the park, easy energy. They reach a bench and sit.

No dialogue: let body language and energy carry it. A laugh, a shove, someone glancing at their phone. Establishes the group as a unit before the split happens.

Direction: Wide-ish tracking shot as they walk in, settle on the bench. Keep this fast: it's setup, not story.

SCENE 2: THE CONVERSATION TURNS (0:05-0:16)

FRIEND 2: "You guys still coming to the party tonight, yeah?"

FRIEND 3: "Of course bro, I can't wait."

DANIEL: "Nah, I'm going to read my Bible tonight. I've got church in the morning."

FRIEND 3: "Bro, what happened to the old fun you?"

FRIEND 2: "What's next, you're gonna start a Christian clothing brand in Ireland?"

DANIEL: "Yeah. That's what I want to do."

Beat. Silence. The friends don't know how to take that.

Friends exchange a look: half-laughing, side-eyeing each other, talking about him rather than to him. Let it trail into muttering that fades under the camera push-in.

Direction: Daniel's last line lands flat and certain — not defensive, not a joke. That stillness after it is the beat. Camera tightens slowly on his face as the friends' voices start to drop under the push-in into Scene 3.

SCENE 3: VFX BEAT: THE BLINK (0:16-0:28)

Camera close on Daniel's face. He blinks.

Friends are gone. He's alone on the bench. Light has dropped.

Beat of stillness: no dialogue.

The bench dips slightly beside him. A soft golden light appears next to him — not a figure, not a face, but a contained glow with weight in the space. Human-adjacent in shape but only ever implied, never resolved. Presence without anatomy. One dove flies past in 3D VFX: the light follows the direction the dove flew.

He blinks again: back: friends still there, still talking, like no time has passed.

Direction: No dialogue in this whole sequence: it stays entirely visual. Sound design carries it: ambient park noise drops out almost completely, comes back in with the blink-back. The golden light should never feel like a character reveal — it's felt, not seen. If it starts to read as a figure, pull it back.

VFX/practical notes: - Light drop: gradeable in post, shoot at consistent exposure, pull shadows down digitally. - Bench dip: practical: off-camera press on the bench frame, or slight rig shake. No CGI needed. - Golden light: a contained volumetric glow — weight and warmth without form. No edges, no silhouette that fully resolves. Think light wrapping around an implied shape rather than illuminating one. Single comp element, warm gold grade. - Dove: full 3D VFX, one pass through frame.

SCENE 4: THE GROUP LEAVES (0:28-0:38)

Group gets up to head off.

FRIEND 2: "Come on, let's go."

A look back at Daniel: half a question, no words needed.

Group walks off. Daniel starts to rise to follow, out of habit.

Flash-cut, half a second: the golden light beside him on the bench.

He stops.

Direction: One line is enough here: anything more from the friends re-treads ground Scene 2 already covered. The look back does the asking; Daniel doesn't need to answer out loud. The flashback interrupting his instinct to follow is the real beat: keep it quick, don't let it drag.

SCENE 5: THE TURN (0:38-0:45)

Daniel turns the other way: the direction the light followed the dove. Walks off alone, settled, not sad.

Friends continue on in the background, oblivious.

No dialogue.

Outro music comes in here — 5 to 7 seconds, carries through to the end card.

END CARD: Reborn Through Him wordmark. Underneath: Coming Soon.
